

Hi, my name is Kuli Dingo

Cheeky and boisterous

Medium Male Dingo Dog

It is our pleasure to introduce one very special dingo: meet "Kuli". Kuli was rescued from almost certain death in South Australia, where dingo ownership is illegal and dingoes are sadly a declared pest despite their native heritage. Kuli was impounded by a local council in South Australia after frequent reports he was chasing stock. Raised alongside the local indigenous community he has become humanised and was causing trouble in the local township. Normal protocol for dingoes seized is euthanasia, as they are sadly a declared pest in South Australia and illegal to keep in captivity. Luckily Kuli's local council in Ceduna were determined to try to save this special dingo. Now thanks to the hard work of the local council in conjunction with Parks and Wildlife officers, Biosecurity SA have granted Kuli a permit to travel to New South Wales. Rather than face certain death Kuli has instead been given the chance to come and live with us as part of our partner program Sydney Dingo Rescue while he searches for a new home in the more dingo-friendly state of New South Wales.
